Synastry Chart · a guide for reflection and conversation

Example using a fictitious couple. Not a customer report.

Prepared on October 4, 2026

How to read your report

Synastry compares the positions of planets in two birth charts. Here it is used as a symbolic starting point for reflection, not a measurement of love or a prediction of your future.

The calculation uses the supplied place, its time zone and local birth time, with tropical zodiac positions from the astrology provider. When time is unknown, noon is only a reference: Moon contacts, houses and angles are excluded from interpretation for that person.

We select conjunctions, sextiles, trines, squares and oppositions between ten planets, with an orb of up to 8°. Contacts involving personal planets come first, then closer orbs. Up to three trines or sextiles and three squares or oppositions are discussed.

The numbers (1) and (2) always identify the first and second person. Orb means the angular deviation from an exact aspect. These are editorial selection rules, not a compatibility score.

The personalised prose is generated with AI from selected chart facts. It may suggest themes you do not recognise. Keep what helps a respectful conversation and leave the rest. It cannot establish feelings, events or relationship history.

Potential sources of ease

Mercury (1) sextile Mercury (2)

Jane and John may find communication flows easily, fostering mutual understanding. This ease can manifest in shared interests or intellectual pursuits that encourage engaging conversations.

An example might be discussing a book or movie, where both feel heard and valued. Their exchange of ideas can lead to deeper insights and mutual respect.

Discussing thoughts openly can enhance their connection. They might set aside time for regular conversations, ensuring both feel involved and appreciated in their intellectual exchanges.

Notice in daily life

Shared ideas can spark creativity and connection.

Something to try

Engage in thoughtful discussions to strengthen bonds.

Keep in mind

Communication flows naturally, encouraging mutual understanding.

Mars (1) sextile Moon (2)

Jane's drive and initiative can harmonize with John's emotional responses, creating a supportive environment where both feel understood and valued in their pursuits.

Consider a scenario where Jane's proactive approach to planning a weekend getaway aligns with John's desire for emotional connection, leading to a fulfilling shared experience.

Discussing their needs openly can enhance this dynamic, allowing Jane and John to appreciate how their different energies complement each other.

Notice in daily life

Look for moments of mutual encouragement.

Something to try

Share a small, spontaneous adventure together.

Keep in mind

Embrace the ease of emotional support.

Mercury (1) sextile Neptune (2)

Jane's Mercury sextile John's Neptune suggests a natural flow in communication, where creativity and intuition can blend seamlessly, fostering imaginative conversations and shared dreams.

They might find themselves discussing abstract ideas or enjoying activities like watching films or visiting art galleries, where their minds can wander and explore possibilities together.

To enhance this connection, they could set aside time for open-ended discussions, allowing each other to express thoughts freely without judgment, nurturing a space for creative collaboration.

Notice in daily life

Embrace spontaneous conversations and creative exchanges today.

Something to try

Share an imaginative idea or dream with each other.

Keep in mind

This aspect encourages intuitive understanding and creative dialogue.

Differences to explore

Moon (1) opposition Venus (2)

Jane's Moon opposing John's Venus might suggest emotional needs and values occasionally clash, creating tension. This could manifest in differing approaches to expressing affection and nurturing each other.

For instance, Jane might prioritize emotional connection, while John values aesthetic experiences. This difference could lead to misunderstandings if not openly communicated and appreciated by both parties.

A constructive way to address this is through open dialogue about each other's needs and preferences. Understanding these differences can foster a deeper appreciation for each other's unique perspectives.

Differences can enrich the relationship with mutual understanding.

Moon (1) opposition Mercury (2)

Jane's emotional responses might sometimes feel at odds with John's way of thinking or communicating, leading to misunderstandings in their everyday interactions.

For instance, Jane might express feelings about a situation, and John could respond with logic, leaving Jane feeling unheard or misunderstood.

Discussing these differences openly can help them appreciate each other's perspectives, fostering a more harmonious and understanding relationship.

Differences can enrich their connection if embraced.

Pluto (1) opposition Mars (2)

Jane Smith's Pluto opposing John Doe's Mars might suggest a dynamic of power struggles, where both may feel the need to assert control in certain situations.

For example, during a disagreement about household responsibilities, they might find themselves at an impasse, each wanting to lead the decision-making process.

Discussing underlying motivations and desires openly can help them understand each other's perspectives, turning potential conflicts into opportunities for growth.

Focus on collaboration, not competition, for harmony.

Four weeks of reflection

Jane and John's relationship has a dynamic blend of intellectual connection and emotional depth, offering opportunities for growth through open communication. They can explore mutual interests and navigate challenges with understanding and patience.

By reflecting on their interactions, Jane and John can deepen their bond, balancing their strengths and addressing differences. This reflection plan encourages thoughtful engagement and shared experiences to enhance their relationship.

Week 1 · Notice Communication Patterns

Pay attention to how you both communicate, especially during discussions. Notice if conversations flow easily or if there are misunderstandings. This week, focus on identifying what helps or hinders your communication.

Week 2 · Discuss Emotional Needs

Have an open conversation about your emotional needs. Share what makes you feel valued and supported. This discussion can help you understand each other's perspectives and create a more nurturing environment.

Week 3 · Try New Activities Together

Engage in activities that interest both of you. This can be a hobby or a new experience. Trying new things together can strengthen your bond and provide insights into how you collaborate and enjoy each other's company.

Week 4 · Review and Reflect

Reflect on the past weeks. Discuss what you've learned about each other and your relationship. Consider what changes have been positive and what areas might need more attention. Use these insights to plan future interactions.

This reflection plan aims to deepen understanding and strengthen your relationship through shared experiences and open communication.

Start with one conversation

Choose one question that matters to both of you. Listen to the answer without using the chart to prove a point. You decide what to take forward together.
